5 Simple Steps to File Your Claim:

1 PHONE CONSULTATION

The first step will be to call our Case Managers to discuss your questions about filing a legal claim.

To better assist you, your Case Manager may need to know:

- Who was diagnosed, when and with what asbestos-related disease
- The victim's work history and if he or she was ever in the military
- If anyone else in your family ever worked around asbestos

Your Case Manager will then assess the information to determine the appropriate next steps for your potential claim.

2 FOLLOW-UP INFORMATION

After your diagnosis and history of asbestos exposure has been reviewed, your team will work to determine if you have a claim.

Depending on the situation, you may have the opportunity to speak with a mesothelioma paralegal. These paralegals have a deep understanding of the legal process, and can walk you through the next steps to take.

A mesothelioma investigator may also want to meet with you in person to discuss the details of your case. These investigators work alongside mesothelioma attorneys, and can help you start the claims process.

Meeting with an investigator will cost you nothing. They also will travel to you, and you can choose the meeting location. Many people choose their home, but you can pick wherever you will be most comfortable.

Your team will follow up with you and keep you updated as your case progresses.

3 INVESTIGATION

After the initial paperwork is completed, your claim will be assigned to a legal team tailored to your specific case. This team of mesothelioma lawyers, investigators and other staff will schedule an introduction with you 3-10 days after receiving your claim.

Once you have been introduced, your team will start collecting details for your mesothelioma claim. They will evaluate your medical records, collect witnesses, and, if needed, retain experts to review medical documents. They will also look into asbestos-containing products which may have caused your illness.

4 FILING YOUR CLAIM

Your claim will be filed when your legal team has confirmed your diagnosis and believes they have identified the asbestos-containing products responsible for your illness. They will file a claim on your behalf while continuing to collect helpful evidence.

In some cases, you may be asked to give a testimony. Should this be necessary, your legal team will meet with you and record your testimony. Most patients can choose to give their testimonies from their home or hospital — not in court.

5 RESULTS AND OUTCOME

It is extremely rare for mesothelioma cases to go to trial. With an estimated $30 Billion available in court-ordered trust money, a settlement will likely be offered if your claim qualifies for compensation. Once your settlement offer is determined, your team will sign off only once you agree to the terms.

TIME TO FILE IS LIMITED

Keep in mind, state laws limit your time to file an asbestos claim. If time runs out, you will not be able to file a claim or receive compensation. Your mesothelioma legal team will stand by you throughout the claims process.
